This concerns the burglary of the Camden, New Jersey, Selective Service Headquarters, 8/22/71, wherein 28 subjects, "Camden 28", were identified as having planned and participated in the burglary. They were indicted by a Federal Grand Jury 8/27/71, and trial commenced 2/5/73, at Camden, New Jersey. U

On 3/16/73, Supervisor [redacted] Newark Division, advised that AUSA [redacted] the prosecutor in captioned matter, wanted to alert SAC Roy K. Moore that he may receive a subpoena from the defense. [redacted] estimated that this subpoena may be forthcoming during the week of 3/26/73. AUSA [redacted] explained that on several occasions when Special Agents were asked who was in charge of the captioned investigation, the name of SAC Roy K. Moore was mentioned. Supervisor [redacted] advised that a teletype would be forwarded to the Minneapolis Division where SAC Moore is temporarily assigned to the Wounded Knee Special alerting him to the possible receipt of a subpoena in captioned matter. Camden 28 Jury Hears Tapes of Radio Links

By LINDA C. HAMMOND
Courier-Post Staff

With the aid of an FBI prepared transcript, the jury in the Camden 28 draft raid case yesterday heard an hour-and-a-half tape of walkie-talkie communications which allegedly was made by defendants the night of the draft office break-in.

The judge permitted the jury to follow the buzzing static-filled tape with the assistance of the 64-page transcript despite defense objections that the transcript is one FBI agent's interpretation of the conversations.

According to special agent Mason P. Smith of the Philadelphia FBI office, the transcript was prepared by him after he had spent 28 nights observing some of the Camden 28 and monitoring their radio (walkie-talkie) transmissions.

Garbled Tape

Only occasional portions of the tape were understandable without having the transcript to follow. Much of the conversation, particularly the first half of the tape, consisted of transmissions such as "Portico calling the Reverend. Portico calling the Reverend. Come in please."

Most of the transmissions used code names for persons, places and situations. Agent Smith testified that he interpreted the code word "Fillmore" to refer to the roof of the Towne House Apartments; "Portico" to be either of two gateways leading to the lawn of St. Paul's Episcopal Church on Market Street diagonally across from the Federal Building; and "Avery" as the name of a guard in the federal building.

Code Identifies

Smith also testified that the person identifying himself as "Little Man" was defendant Paul Couming and the one calling himself "Little Man's Assistant" was defendant Robert Good. He also identified the voices of defendant John Grady, alleged FBI informer Robert Hardy and severed defendant Frank Pommersheim.

According to the transcript, a female voice said, "This is Portico calling. The things around here are very clear. The landlord is in the basement." To which a male voice responded, "Portico, I didn't know you were in there. Portico, Good to hear from you. I thought I had some other contact, now Portico. We're just a short distance away and ah, things look, ah, very quiet here. Over."

Talk Transcript

The female voice is said to have answered, "Same here. Over." And the male to have continued, "Yeah, then we'll probably see you back at the party and, ah, hope you can make it. It looks like we could, ah, we may be doing something. Over."

Later, conversations mention card games, numbers of players and bidding. At one point, a male voice is quoted in the transcript as saying, "Little Man to East Portico. We will be joining the game about 2:30 and we'll probably be bidding higher than 4. Can you read that? Over."

At one point, prosecuting Assistant U.S. Attorney John Barry stopped the tape, as he did several times throughout the playing, and questioned Smith.

Smith questioned, "Do you know where Little Man may have been at that time?" he asked, referring to a transmission on the tape.

Smith responded, "That statement was made immediately after the point in time I testified about yesterday when I said I saw eight people walking on the roof of the post office loading dock at the back of the federal building."

"Do you know what time they started up the ladder?" Barry asked.

"I think it was 2:38," said Smith.

Other conversations refer to a rope, trick, a dice game, bags of money and chips, and other game rooms.

The tape ends with a male voice saying, "There's a guard coming. There's a guard coming. There's a guard coming," and a second male voice repeating the message.

Agent's Interpretation

Smith said he made the transcript after seeing some persons at certain locations night after night, combined with hearing their voices on the radio transmissions and then talking to them during and after the arrests.

The conversations were recorded on cassettes and later typed by a stenographer according to what she thought

...then went over her version and made corrections, and when it was typed to his approval he initialed it, Smith explained.

Defense attorney David Kairys said he objected to Smith testifying about locations of people while they were speaking because Smith was not in a position to see everyone who was talking on the walkie-talkies.

Objects to Transcript

Kairys also objected to Smith identifying any of the voices, saying Smith is not a voice identification expert. He asked that the jury not be given the transcript, because, he stressed, it is only one man's version.

Judge Clarkson Fisher overruled all of Kairys' objections but did warn members of the jury that they are to determine the accuracy of the transcript, and the accuracy of Smith's testimony.

Emergency Channel

Yesterday, he said, that Civil Defense teams were broadcasting continuously trying to aid stranded motorists in the city. The civil defense teams several times said the channel had been declared an emergency broadcast channel and others were asked not to use it, Smith testified. At one time, he said, there was a transmission, "Take your car playing to another channel."

At the end of yesterday's session, the Rev. Edward (Ned) Murphy moved that the cases against him and the Rev. Edward McGowan be dismissed because they are charged only with conspiracy, and Smith testified Monday that he personally observed no violations of federal law during the 28 nights he spent in surveillance of the 28. The judge denied the motion for the time being.

BACKGROUND

audit*

On 8/22/71 at 4:35 a.m. twenty persons were arrested by FBI Agents after breaking into the Selective Service Draft Board in Camden, New Jersey. Eight additional persons were arrested subsequently. Indictments charging Conspiracy and Destruction of Government Property were later obtained. Joseph E. Ziel who was at that time ASAC of the Newark, New Jersey, Office was in charge of the Bureau's operation in Camden, New Jersey, on 8/21-22/71. Trial in U. S. District Court at Camden, New Jersey, commenced 2/5/73 before U. S. District Court Judge Clarkson S. Fisher. U

PURPOSE AND OBSERVATIONS

The purpose of this memorandum is to advise that J. E. Ziel testified as a U. S. Government witness and was "on the stand" for five and one half days concluding at about 4:30 p.m. 3/30/73. Ziel was cross examined by 16 defendants and three lawyers for the defendants during this period concerning the arrests and the operations of the FBI on 8/21-22/71. All nineteen cross examiners attempted to belittle and malign the FBI. At the conclusion of his testimony Ziel was requested by Judge Fisher to see him in his chambers. During this visit Judge Fisher advised Ziel that he was a "magnificent witness" and that he (the Judge) was very proud of the FBI and the way Ziel handled himself as a witness. U

Informer Testifies F.B.I. Had Him Provoke Camden Draft File Raid

BY DONALD JANSON

Special to The New York Times

CAMDEN, April 10—Robert W. Hardy, a witness in the "Camden 28" case, testified today that the Federal Bureau of Investigation had used him as an agent provocateur to make sure the defendants revived and carried out their plans to destroy draft files here.

Seventeen of the 28 accused opponents of the war in Vietnam are on trial in Federal District Court on charges of breaking into the Federal building here and ripping up files on Aug. 22, 1971. The cases of the 11 others arrested will be handled later.

Frank Donner, a New York City lawyer who has made a study of the use of informers by the F.B.I., said in an interview in the courtroom that this was the first time in any case in United States history that a Government informer had been called as a witness by the defense rather than the Government.

The Government rested its case last week without calling Mr. Hardy, a general contractor in Camden.

Mr. Hardy testified today that he did not agree with the defendants' philosophy that civil disobedience or lawbreaking was a justifiable means of protesting the war in Vietnam.

Dealings With F.B.I. Cited

He said that when Michael Giocondo of Camden, a friend who was one of the protesters, had told him of plans to raid the draft board office, he had gone to the F.B.I. and had agreed to the agency's proposal that he meet regularly with the group and report regularly on their plans.

In return, he said, the F.B.I. agreed to arrest the group on charges of conspiracy before any aid was actually made, and that it said none of his friends in the group would be in jail.

The contractor said the two agents he had dealt with, Michael M. Ryman and Terrence P. Neist, had agreed that the plotters were "obviously not criminals" but "just misguided." Those on trial include priests, young women and other Roman Catholics opposed to the draft.

Mr. Hardy said he had become upset when the F.B.I. had not keep a pledge to him to arrest the group during a "dry run" a week before the actual raid.

The next day I asked Mike Ryman what had happened, he said, and he told me, "Someone in the little White House in California decided the arrests were not to be made that night."

Two Versions of Policy

F.B.I. agents testifying for the Government had said the arrests had not been made until after draft records, actually were destroyed because of the need to find all the conspirators before arresting any and to guarantee the safety of the 80 agents on hand to make the arrests.

Mr. Hardy testified, on the other hand, that the policy actually followed by the agency in making the arrests had been first to "make sure the defendants commit as many crimes as possible and destroy draft files."

The defense contends the F.B.I., with daily reports on the planning for two months before the event, could easily have stopped the action short of destruction of files but preferred to see the raid carried out in order to punish the group and thereby repress the anti-war movement.

The defense also maintains that use of an agent provocateur to "create a crime is illegal. The agent in charge of the case, Joseph Ziel, testified earlier that "as standard procedure, the F.B.I. permitted informants to be active within the group that he is working with to the point of supplying expertise and supplies, as long as there is nothing furnished which would endanger the life of anybody, such as explosives, firearms, weapons.

Tools Supplied

The United States Supreme Court has not yet ruled on how far an undercover agent can go in assisting or provoking anti-war or other "political actions."

Mr. Hardy testified that he had supplied 90 per cent of the burglary tools the defendants needed to break into the draft board office on the fifth floor of the Federal Building. He said that he had done so with F.B.I. approval and that the F.B.I. had reimbursed him for the cost of each item.

As they were placed on the green carpet in front of the witness box by David Kalrys, a defense attorney, Mr. Hardy identified chisels, pry bars, crowbars, bolt cutters, screwdrivers, utility knives, hammers, glass cutters, walkie-talkies, crills and drill bits, and other items he had provided for the break-in.

He said he had taught the group how to use the tools, how to get to the fifth floor by using his ladder, how to break in, and how to carry out the raid with the aid of a schematic drawing of the office that he had helped to prepare after he used a ruse to enter the draft board earlier for a look around.

"I provided the aid and strategy they needed to get into the building," Mr. Hardy testified. "This raid on the draft board would not have happened without me and the F.B.I."

He said he had told the F.B.I. this "at least 15 times" before the raid was carried out.

Revival of Plans

He said Mr. Giocondo and two other defendants had told him, at about the time he had first learned of the plans, that they were ready to give up plans for the raid because there was no way they knew of to get into the building and because they believed the F.B.I. had learned of their plans.

With the encouragement of the F.B.I., Mr. Hardy said, he was able to revive the plans by supplying tools and expertise.

Cross-examined by assistant United States John J. Barry, the witness said that he had received a total of $7,500 from the F.B.I. for his information, burglary tools, for gasoline for the van he had supplied and for food for the plotters, many of whom had come from New York City, Boston, Washington and other cities.

During direct examination, Mr. Hardy said that he had agreed to serve the F.B.I. as an undercover agent, but was dismayed to find he was being used instead as a "provocateur."

Following the arrests, he said, he decided to put on record "the truth as I knew it" and prepared an affidavit disclosing how he and the F.B.I. had functioned in the case. He gave the affidavit to the defense last year and the Government decided not to call him as a witness.

Also for the information of the Bureau, AUSA [] Newark, N.J., made the following comments regarding the acquittal of the subjects in this case:

In [] opinion, the acquittal was due to a number of reasons; most important were the end of the Viet Nam War, the current developments in the Watergate case and the Pentagon Papers trial. [] also stated that the defendants were permitted to discuss in court the conditions of the prisons in the U.S., drug problems of returning military personnel from Viet Nam and the atrocities of the Viet Nam War.

Also in [] opinion, the fact that the defendants consisted of priests and young female defendants contributed largely to the not guilty verdict.

VIEWPOINT

Justice served

The acquittal of 17 war protesters of charges stemming from a 1971 raid on a draft board in Camden mercifully marks a close to one of the shabbiest episodes in American law enforcement.

With its verdict, a federal court jury gave legal sanction to testimony that U.S. officials, in an excess of zeal, to put it charitably, indulged in practices that have no place in a free society.

The testimony involved, not for the first time, the use of agents provocateurs — government agents who incited and actually participated in illegal acts in order to entrap and convict others.

The agent provocateur in this case, a 33-year-old self-employed contractor who served as an FBI informer, testified that the raid would not have taken place "without the FBI and me."

The defendants, who admitted participating in the raid, claimed they had dropped plans for it until Robert Hardy, the contractor, revitalized them. Hardy testified that he used the FBI's money to pay for the burglary tools used to force the illegal entry.

In his charge to the jury, Judge Clarkson Fisher put the issue as well as it can be put when he said:

"If you find that the overreaching participation by government agents or informers in the activities as you have heard them were so fundamentally unfair to be an offense to the basic standards of decency and shocking to the universal sense of justice, then you may acquit any of the defendants to whom this defense applies."

The jury, in acquitting all, obviously deemed it applied to all concerned in this matter.

Even if this were an unprecedented and unrelated act by government agents, it would be highly deplorable. But it appears to fit a pattern of unconscionable conduct that has been emerging with increasing frequency.

In the Watergate case and related investigations, we have been presented with evidence that the Central Intelligence Agency gave assistance to two men who perpetrated a common burglary at a psychiatrist's office and that, in another instance, the CIA was asked by White House aides to take part in a coverup of further illegal activities. Happily, in the second instance, the CIA refused.

Although it was not part of the legal proceeding, it was apparent that the general weariness with the war and the reaction to nation's involvement in what the defense characterized as an "illegal and immoral" conflict strongly influenced the jurors. It also was evident in the fact that the acquittal was the first legal victory for the anti-war movement in the last five years of similar draft-record protest incidents.

Law enforcement officials in America are entitled to full and complete support from every citizen. At the same time, the officials must act in a way to be worthy of that trust. It is quite clear that, in the Camden case, these basic standards of decency were not met.

Dear

Enclosed herewith are photographs and the pencil sketch re service area located in block bordered by Cooper and 4th Streets, Camden, New Jersey.

In reviewing the sketch you will note that I have reflected the existing fences in pencil, checking ends and corners by blue mark with a number identification on sketch and photographs.

Also, I have indicated a correction re Cooper Street building numbered 324. You may verify this correction by review of aerial photograph of that block.

We are currently working on having our RA moved to that new office building in Cherry Hill that I showed you while you were here. I understand it is now pending Bureau approval.

Since seeing you last I have traveled to the land of sky blue ^(water) living (Eastern Shore) and the fishing was excellent.

Will continue to assist in any way, Best regards to all.

Sincerely yours.

17 Acquitted in Raid On N.J. Draft Board

CAMDEN, N.J., May 20 (AP)

Seventeen war protesters, including four Catholic priests, were found innocent today of charges stemming from a 1971 raid on the draft board here.

The jury of five women and seven men deliberated over four days before handing up its verdict in what was known as the "Camden 28" trial.

Ten of the original 28 persons arrested in connection with the Aug. 21, 1971, raid and the destruction of draft board records were severed from the trial that began in U.S. District Court here last Feb. 5. Another pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge.

The Rev. Edward McGowan and the Rev. Edward Murphy, both of New York City, each were charged with one count of conspiracy, while the other 15 defendants were charged with conspiracy, breaking and entering and destroying draft records.

Jury deliberation in the 15-week-old trial started at 4 p.m. last Thursday.

The jury spent most of Friday in open court listening to a re-reading of portions of the charge on conspiracy and the extent of governmental participation in the raid. The panel deliberated for several hours Saturday and resumed deliberations early today.

The verdict was reached at noon. It was not announced until 2:30 p.m. when the defendants were recalled to the courtroom.

After the jury returned to the courtroom, foreman James Womack began to read verdicts of acquittal on each of the seven counts against the first defendant, Terry Bucklew of Philadelphia. Judge Clarkson Fisher stopped him and asked if the jury had any verdict other than innocent against the remaining defendants.

"No sir," Womack replied.

Most of the original defendants were arrested in and around the draft board the night of the antiwar protest operation.

A highlight of the trial was the testimony of FBI informer Robert W. Hardy, 33, a self-employed contractor. He testified that the raid would not have taken place without the FBI and me.

The defendants, who admitted participating in the raid, claimed they had dropped plans for the raid until Hardy revitalized them. Hardy testified as a defense witness and said he bought the defendants food and buglarly tools with FBI funds.

In his charge, Judge Fisher told the jury it must decide whether governmental participation in the raid went beyond the bounds of permissible law enforcement.

"If you find that the overreaching participation by government agents or informers in the activities as you have heard them were so fundamentally unfair to be an offense to the basic standards of decency and shocking to the universal sense of justice, then you may acquit any of the defendants to whom this defense applies," Fisher had said.

Defendant Joan Rielly, of New York, called the verdict a "people's victory" and praised the jury.

The remaining defendants in the trial were Miss Rielly's sister, Rosemary, Anne Dunham, Robert Good, John Grady and the Rev. Peter Ford, all of New York City; Margaret Inness, Paul Cummings, and Barry Musi of Boston; the Rev. Michael Doyle and Michael Giocondo of Camden; Kathleen Ridolchi and Robert Williams of Philadelphia; and John Swinglish of Washington.

Camden 28 Jurors Pin Verdict on 'Agent Provocateur'

Apper 40-1227
ALL INFORMATION CONTAINED
HEREIN IS UNCLASSIFIED
DATE 7-10-84 BY SP5 RJH

The verdict in the trial of the Camden 28, acquitted last week for a draft board raid they admittedly committed, was not a protest against the war but against the government's use of an "agent provocateur."

This is the picture drawn from interviews with eight of the jurors who brought in the verdict on May 20 after a 15-weeks-long trial. Seven of the eight said their verdict was based mostly on the issue of "overreaching government participation" in the crime.

The trial was for 17 persons of 28 originally arrested for breaking and entering and destroying draft files in the Federal Building in Camden in August 1971 as an anti-war protest.

The 28, including four priests, are members of the "Catholic Resistance." Several have participated in other draft board raids and similar actions around the country.

They asked the jury to refuse to convict them for two reasons:

—as a protest against the war in Southeast Asia;

—because the government, through informer Robert W. Hardy, learned about the conspiracy to raid the draft board months before it happened, and yet instructed Hardy to provide assistance so the defendants could commit the crime.

The judgment of the jury stands as the most complete court victory for the anti-war movement. "For years we've heard guilty, guilty, guilty," said defendant the Rev. Edward Murphy. "But we finally got a jury that said 'enough.'"

Of the eight jurors who have now been contacted, only one, Samuel Braithwaite, of Atlantic City, said the war was the most important factor in voting for acquittal.

Mrs. Anna Bertino, of Hammonton, N.J., said government involvement in the crime was the reason she voted for acquittal, but she does not know if she still would have acquitted the defendants if the government had not participated in the crime.

"There was a strong feeling among the jurors that they wanted to join the defendants in taking a stand against the war," Mrs. Bertino said.

Mrs. Anne Marie Carnian said she would have had difficulty convicting the defendants even if there had not been an informer — although the government participation issue was most important to her.

Feeling against Hardy, an East Camden contractor who testified on behalf of the defense, calling himself an "agent provocateur" — apparently ran high among jurors. On the stand, he said his conscience rebelled at his informing — but he still accepted $5,000 in pay from the FBI. He also admitted to having previous experience breaking into buildings — and not as an antiwar protest.

"I feel bad that our government would use a person like this," Mrs. Jane Buterbaugh, of Millville, N.J., said.

The jury of seven women and five men — three of them black — with an average age of 47 years, was strongly antiwar. Jurors say that only one of their number professed any approval of the war or America's continuing involvement in Southeast Asia.

Mrs. Bertino and Braithwaite are both outspokenly antiwar, and since the trial ended have contacted members of the Camden 28 to express their personal appreciation of the antiwar activists' efforts.

Other jurors who said they based their decision on the issue of overreaching government participation are: James Lomax, town council president of Penns Grove, N.J.; Eleanor R. Blaszczyk, of Cinnaminson, N.J., who reportedly became embroiled in an argument with Braithwaite over his antiwar statements and Edward Dobson, a highway department worker for the City of Camden.

Anna Mathis, of Gloucester, N.J., said her vote for acquittal of the Camden 28 was "A protest against the government's participation in it. And you can quote me as being with them 100 percent. They stand for what is right.

Miss Mathis, a sewing machine operator, said she was apathetic about the war before the trial, which featured long expositions of the defendants' antiwar views. Now, she said, "I feel bad I didn't do anything (to stop the war). I still feel there are times you have to stand up and fight, but not the way we're doing it."

"It proves," said ex-defendant The Rev. Peter Ford of the verdict, "that if you're able to deal with people on a long-term basis and speak out confidently and as honestly and truthfully as possible, people will listen."

"And they will do a lot. nobody expects them to do."

Adrian Lee ... The View From Here

The Implications of the

Camden Verdict

The Camden war-protest jury ran through five paper ballots before it decided to acquit 17 of the "Camden 28." There was never a single "guilty" the whole four days the seven women and five men deliberated, only "not guilty" and "not ready (to vote)."

The jury — Roman Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Baptists — prayed before the first ballot on Thursday, and after the last ballot Sunday morning, and since several of the jurors wrote a "distinctive ... giveaway" hand, the foreman, James E. Lomax, a black, production-line trouble-shooter for the DuPont Co., reduced the two possible verdicts to numbers: guilty became "1" on the paper ballot slips torn from a pad of yellow, ruled paper; not guilty was "2" and "not ready" was "3."

FOR TWO DAYS and three ballots, the vote was six "2"s and six "3"s, as the jury grappled with what Lomax, also a Penns. Grove borough councilman, called the "key issue" of the trial: was FBI informer Robert Hardy, 33-year-old Camden painting contractor, really the instigator of the draft-board break-in the defense said he was — and as Hardy himself seemed to concede on the witness stand? Or, was he merely the involuntary witness, the spectator the U.S. Government tried to project?

And, lastly, what Lomax called the most "critical questions" of all: Why didn't the government put on a rebuttal witness — "an FBI agent, anybody" — to reestablish Hardy as the "conscientious" citizen informing on a plot to break the law? In failing to do so, was the government conceding that Hardy actually lured the more militant Catholic Left into a break-in it had abandoned, for lack of the tools and expertise Hardy finally provided?

FOR THE SIX "not guilty," the questions seemed pretty much academic; a canvass of the jury suggests that these jurors were already determined to acquit — either because they were already convinced of Hardy's perfidy, or because they hated the war so much they were willing to tolerate, even legitimize breaking and entering, and the destruction of draft board records as acceptable "free speech expression."

It was the other six jurors, the six "not readys," who wanted to hear Hardy's testimony "one last time"; and it was this that brought all 12 jurors back into court unexpectedly, last Friday — six of them with their minds all made up, six still uncertain, still questioning, hoping that U.S. District Court Judge Fisher's reading of the Hardy Q&A would finally bring the "real Hardy" into clear focus.

From there on in, said Lomax, it was "all down hill for acquittal."

AND IF SATURDAY'S 10-2 vote suggested two holdouts left, two "not readys," there was, in fact, only one, an unidentified woman. Although Lomax had already decided to vote for acquittal, he professed doubts and "stuck along" with the woman, "to bear her up and comfort her." Said Lomax, who earned his fellow jurors' confidence and outspoken admiration: "I wanted her to feel she had at least one person she could share her doubts with. I didn't want her to feel she was being stampeded into a not guilty verdict, or that she was out there all by herself."

By noon Sunday, these doubts — the jury's last, from all accounts — had disappeared; and Lomax knocked on the jury-room door to signal that the jury in U.S. vs. the Camden 17 had reached a verdict.

So much of the mechanics of the verdict.

BUT WHAT OF the implications, the jury's apparent willingness to tolerate a clear-cut case of burglary, the rifling and destruction of draft files, as legitimate antiwar protest? Whatever Hardy's efforts to "entrap or ensnare" the defendants, how is a not-guilty verdict in such circumstances to be justified?

Occasionally, Lomax and other jurors allude to some of the younger defendants as "children," as if 21, 22 and 23-year-olds were too young to comprehend what they were doing.

But there's hardly any applying the word to a Fulbright scholar or to Jesuit priests, with their passion for logic, their disciplined minds and backgrounds of rigorous scholarship.

Where do they leave the rule of law?

Where would they — or the jury that acquitted them — draw the line now, between permissible or impermissible conduct?

IF THE LAW is no longer an acceptable dividing line, what is?

If burglary and destruction of government files is to be tolerated, in the name of dissent, well then, why not violence? Why not, for instance, dynamitings and murder, the killing of the young physics researcher in the bombing of the Army Mathematics Research Center at the University of Wisconsin in 1970?

Already some of the militants at the university and elsewhere are writing off the researcher's death as one of the unintentioned, even unavoidable byproducts of dissent, to be subordinated to the "rightness . . . the morality" of their cause.

It is a fearsome place the New Moralists would have us wander in, beyond the protections, the inhibitions of the law.

Adrian Lee's opinion column also appears on Sundays.

GENERAL INVESTIGATIVE DIVISION

BACKGROUND: This concerns the burglary of the Camden, New Jersey, Selective Service Headquarters, 8/22/71, wherein 28 subjects, "Camden 28," were identified as having participated in the burglary. Federal grand jury indictment was returned 8/27/71, and original trial commenced 2/5/73, at Camden. Of the 28 subjects indicted (10 were severed from the trial and one plead guilty to a lesser charge) 17 went to trial and were acquitted 5/20/73, when the jury returned not guilty verdicts on these subjects. u

In [] opinion, the acquittal was due to a number of reasons; most important were the end of the Viet Nam War, the current developments in the Watergate case and the Pentagon Papers trial. [] also stated that the defendants were permitted to discuss in court the conditions of the prisons in the United States, drug problems of returning military personnel from Viet Nam, and the atrocities of the Viet Nam War. U

Also in [] opinion, the fact that the defendants consisted of priests and young female defendants contributed largely to the not guilty verdict. U

Camden 28 Trial Looks to Juror No. 10

A dozen U. S. Marshals stood in a half circle in front of the high mahogany bench in U.S. District Court in Camden Thursday and listened as clerk Pat Ronga went through the solemn ritual of giving them custody of the jury in the Camden 28 trial.

"Do you solemnly swear to take each person sworn upon this jury and keep them together in some private place without meat and drink, water excepted, unless it has been otherwise ordered by the court?" Ronga said, and the marshalls chorused, "I do."

Judge Clarkson Fisher stood up and, in the form which has been customary for him throughout the 15-week-long trial, cracked a joke: "Ladies and gentlemen of the jury," he said, "You don't believe that part about food and drink, do you?"

The laughter on the third floor of the Camden Federal Building — two floors below where the draft board raid charged to the 17 defendants took place — was unrestrained — including defendants, prosecutors, court personnel and jurors.

There were originally 28 defendants in the case (11 have been severed to be tried separately) and they are members of the "Catholic Resistance." Most admit that they plotted and carried out the destruction of Selective Service documents in the Aug. 22, 1971, raid as an act of protest against the Vietnam war.

They are asking the jury to flout the law and acquit them as an act of protest against what defendants call the "continuing Vietnam war." The defense also maintains that the Federal Bureau of Investigation, through informant Robert W. Hardy of Camden, committed entrapment and conspiracy by providing funds, food, tools and plans for the raid.

Those on trial in the case range in age from 20 to 47. They come from across the country, as well as from Philadelphia and Camden. Four are priests and nearly all are Catholics. Ten are women.

Of the 17 defendants now on trial, most represented themselves — and all of them had plenty to say. Defense summations alone took more than a week.

Much of defendants' testimony — permitted by Judge Fisher over prosecution objections — concerned their personal convictions about the immorality of the Vietnam War. Defendant Anne Dunham, 23, of Pelham, N. Y., for instance, asked the jury to assume "responsibility for the millions, millions who have been killed and wounded on both sides, been made homeless, been made refugees."

As the lengthy trial entered its final days, the Camden 28 repeatedly emphasized the recent Watergate scandal and Pentagon Papers trial developments as a sort of vindication for the statements they had been making about the government.

In closing statements, there was often a lyrical tone to their remarks.

Jesuit priest Edward McGowan, 36, a former parochial school history teacher, told the jury about walking by Camden's City Hall and reading the names of war dead.

"One of the first names I saw was Edward McGowan. Now I know he's no relation. But I had an uncle Ed McGowan who died in the First World War in France. I know a fair amount about that war, and I thought, well, at least those are two Ed McGowans I know of who probably died in vain."

Prosecutor John J. Barry says that most of the defendants are antiwar professionals — not amateurs led on by Hardy — and their motives should not be considered in determining whether or not they committed the alleged crimes.

Most observers were predicting lengthy jury deliberations. And, as the jury retired Thursday afternoon for sequestration, a lot of hopes and fears — rested with Juror Number 10.

Number 10 — Samuel Braithwaite of Atlantic City — has proved to be very unusual. On numerous occasions, he has broken with tradition and asked questions of witnesses: Most of his questions were phrased in such a way as to indicate that Braithwaite didn't think highly of the government or the Vietnam war.

At one point, several of Braithwaite's fellow jurors signed a communication to the judge disassociating themselves from his questioning (jurors' questions were asked anonymously, through the judge).

The possibility of a hung jury in a trial that the judge estimated cost the government half a million dollars is very real, some observers believe.

'28' Jury Gets 'Emotional'

A new foreman was selected by the jury in the Camden 28 trial Saturday amid reports that deliberations on the draft case were becoming heated.

The jury, unable to reach a decision on Saturday, is scheduled to resume its sessions today.

Mark Stolar, a defense attorney, reported that Mrs. Groverline Bartlett of Pine Hill had asked to be relieved as foreman after three short sessions because "she didn't feel strong enough to handle it. It was getting into heated discussion."

U.S. District Court Judge Clarkson S. Fisher called the jury into court at 2 P.M. and told the panel of seven women and five men to pick a new foreman or draw lots. A new, unidentified foreman was chosen.

"We have come a long way and all of us have reached an emotional stage," Fisher told the panel. "Try and be kind to each other."

The jury took up the case of the 17 remaining defendants in the lengthy trial on Thursday. They heard 40 witnesses in a 3½-month trial stemming from a 1971 raid on a draft board in Camden.

"Evidently people (on the jury) are getting pretty personally involved. People feel very strongly about this case," Stolar said.

Camden Jury Adjourns Until Noon Today

The jury of seven women and five men deliberating the trial of 17 defendants in the Camden draft board raid, adjourned late yesterday without reaching a verdict.

The panel which began deliberating the verdict Thursday, will resume today at noon.

As yesterday's session adjourned, the jury was forced to select a new foreman when the juror who has served in that capacity for the entire 15 week trial asked to be relieved of her duties.

Mrs. Groverline Bartlett, the forelady, told U.S. District Judge Clarkson Fisher that she was no longer willing to serve in that position. The judge told the jury in the courtroom about 3 P.M. yesterday that a new foreman should be elected either in the jury room by vote or lots, or in court by lots.

"Be kind to each other," Judge Fisher said to the jurors. He told them they were approaching an "emotional state" and they should stay strong in your beliefs.

This is to advise the Bureau and SAC, Springfield comments made by U. S. District Judge CLARKSON S. FISHER 8/6/73 concerning testimony given by SAC JOSEPH E. ZIEL captioned case.

I met Judge FISHER in the lobby on entering the building and he stopped me to exchange greetings. Judge FISHER was very complimentary of SAC JOSEPH E. ZIEL and the testimony he provided during the trial of the "Camden 28." Judge FISHER said Mr. ZIEL, testifying for a number of days, handled himself in a most professional manner which was in keeping with the high standards of the FBI. He noted the defendants in conducting their own cross examination of Mr. ZIEL were rude and loud. However, SAC ZIEL maintained constantly his composure, never talking down to anyone and he wanted to pass on the compliment to me. Judge FISHER observed the trial did not end up in favor of the government but this was in no way due to a lack of investigative effort by the FBI but was in keeping with the times. He did not explain this comment and I did not deem it prudent to pursue it with the judge. I expressed to him my appreciation for his thoughtfulness in bringing to my attention the complimentary remarks pertaining to SAC ZIEL and the FBI. This is being brought to the Bureau's attention for information and also for the information of SAC, Springfield.

(MEDBURG SUSPECT - CAMDEN ACTION SUBJECT)
(OO:PHILADELPHIA)

Re Bureau airtel dated 7/3/73. U

Efforts to locate the subject proved fruitless, and investigation in the area of [REDACTED] Philadelphia, Pa., her only known residence of record, indicated that the subject was not residing with her parents at that address. U

Because of this, it was decided to try to enlist the aid of [REDACTED] father of the subject. [REDACTED] had been contacted during the Medburg investigation and had been semi-cooperative and indicated that he was not in approval of his daughter's activities. U

On 7/30/73, [REDACTED] was contacted by Bureau Agents. [REDACTED] would not listen to any explanation as to why agents wanted to interview his daughter. He said that the past was dead, and that he did not desire to have it resurrected. He said that he knew that his daughter had done wrong, but that she had suffered enough for it. He said that the trial was over and that he felt that that was the end of it; and that he would consider any further attempts by the Government to contact her to be harassment. He said he felt so deeply about it that, if necessary, he would sue the Government in order to get it to leave his daughter alone. U

Because it was obvious that nothing could be accomplished in trying to reason with [] the interview was terminated. The entire contact with him lasted less than five minutes. U

Since [] attitude undoubtedly reflects the current feelings of the whole [] family, it does not appear that further efforts to locate and interview the subject at this time are warranted. U

However, Philadelphia still feels that [] possesses information concerning JOHN PETER GRADY and [] activities and whereabouts prior to and during the pertinent Medburg period, which is important to Medburg. U

Therefore, in the course of the Medburg investigation this will be borne in mind, and consideration will be given to trying to interview [] at a future date. However, any future investigation along this line will be conducted out of the Medburg file. U

Since the charges against the subject in the Camden Action have been dismissed, there is no further reason for maintaining an open file on [] and this case is being placed in a closed status. U

As stated before, any investigation concerning [] pertinent to Medburg, will be conducted out of the Medburg case file. U

Re Philadelphia airtel dated 4/25/72, which set out
ROBERT BERK's connection with and importance to Medburg. u

Enclosed for Los Angeles are two (2) xerox copies of the memo of SA THOMAS F. LEWIS to the SAC, Philadelphia, dated 8/1/69, and captioned "Conference of War Resisters, International, Haverford College, Haverford, Pa., 8/25-31/69;
IS - Miscellaneous." u

Also enclosed for Los Angeles are three copies of a 1961 Passport photograph of BERK. u

For the information of the Bureau, it has been determined that BERK is connected with the American Board of Missions for Jews in Los Angeles, and also the First Baptist Church of Hollywood. His residence is 6146 West
Eleanor Avenue, Hollywood, California. u

BERK's file and his relationship to Medburg has been analyzed and the following resume is set out for the benefit of Los Angeles: u

BERK suffers from asthma, and, as a youth, he was placed on a diet in an attempt to cure the condition. The diet almost killed him and left him with a calcium deficiency in his hands, which impairs his use of them. In addition, one observer commented that the diet also left him mentally retarded, eccentric, and a religious fanatic. He has also been described as having a psychosomatic illness and asthma. u

From December 1955 to September 1956, BERK was active in the Young Socialist League (YSL) in New York City. From December 1957 through August 1958, he was active in the Independent Socialist League (ISL) in New York City. U

From December 1957 to November 1961, he was on the SI of the New York Office. U

In April 1971, when an attempt to interview BERK was made by Chicago agents, he was uncooperative. To be more precise, he had a reception committee, complete with banners, of seminary students waiting for the agents. U

From statements made by BERK during the attempts to interview him, it was subsequently determined that he had furnished information, off and on, during a 12 or 13 year period to one [redacted] U

[redacted] when interviewed, stated that BERK was extremely anti-Communist, but was also a radical pacifist. The information BERK furnished to [redacted] was always of an anti-Communist nature. He would never furnish any information about any anti-war activities. U

BERK called [redacted] shortly after Medburg because he was having problems with his associates in the War Resisters League (WRL). Because BERK's name had appeared (superimposed) on a stolen Medburg document, BERK claimed that the WRL thought he was an FBI informant. U

It is known that at about the same time, BERK wrote to "Resist" in Boston, which had disseminated copies of stolen Medburg documents, complaining that by releasing the serial with his name on it, Resist had branded him an informant. U

Unfortunately, it was about this time that the Bureau tried to interview BERK, a time when he obviously was trying to convince his buddies that he was not an informant. U

b6
b7C

[] stated that in his contacts with BERK, he had exhibited a pattern of cooperativeness on one occasion and uncooperativeness on another. U

While it is realized that BERK is an erratic, eccentric individual, this may well work in the Bureau's favor. U

At the first attempt to interview BERK, justly or unjustly, he apparently felt that he had received bad press by being branded a Bureau informant, and was not in a receptive mood. However, after a passage of time and a change of location, he might be in one of his cooperative moods. U

It is felt that the best change of success in an interview of BERK is in isolating him, and by implanting in his mind the thought that Medburg, and his subsequent problems, were the result of actions on the part of godless communists; that they and not the FBI were responsible for his problems, thus his cooperation could be elicited by concentrating on both this anti-communist and zealous religious emotional feelings. U

If BERK would answer the questions about his name tag set forth in referenced Philadelphia airtel of 4/24/72, it would be of immense value to Medburg. For this reason, it is believed that every reasonable effort should be made to gain his cooperation. U

LEADS

LOS ANGELES:

AT HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA

Will attempt to interview BERK in an effort to obtain the answers to the questions about his name tag as set out in referenced Philadelphia airtel of 4/25/72. U

It is suggested that the interview might best be conducted by experienced agents with a security background who have had experience in dealing with individuals having an ideology and temperament similar to BERK's. U

PH 52-7165

Since the stolen enclosure has received widespread publicity, there appears to be no reason why it should not be shown to BERK. In fact, it would appear desirable to do so in order that BERK could understand that the Bureau had no interest in him, but only in the history of the name tag. U

Re Philadelphia letter, 8/17/73, which requested Los Angeles to attempt to interview ROBERT BERK. u

Enclosed for the Bureau are two (2) copies each of a Los Angeles letter to Philadelphia dated 9/4/73, and an FD-302 dated 8/31/73, reflecting the results of an interview with BOB BERK. u

While Los Angeles did an excellent job in successfully conducting an interview with BERK, unfortunately, because of the passage of four years' time since the War Resisters Conference, BERK could not recall precisely how he disposed of his name tag. u

Thus, while the information from BERK reinforced the previously held theories, he was unable to furnish specifics that would open up new avenues of investigation concerning the initial reproduction of the Medburg documents. u

Re Philadelphia letter to the Bureau dated 8/17/73. u

Enclosed herewith are three (3) copies of an FD-302 reflecting an interview with ROBERT BERK in Los Angeles, California, on 8/30/73. u

For the information of Philadelphia, BERK was contacted and interviewed at 9:00 a.m. without any prior contact. His attitude was at first polite, but very suspicious. After some conversation he appeared convinced that the mysterious appearance of his superimposed name tag on one of the stolen FBI documents was not an act done by the FBI to perhaps embarrass him among his liberal associates. Thereafter, his attitude appeared to be more friendly and less strained and he appeared to be convinced that the act was done by someone in WRL, deliberately to cause him embarrassment and possible suspicion of involvement in the breakin at Media. u

He appeared to be telling the truth about circumstances surrounding his attendance at the International Conference and said he just could not recall with any detail, the issuance and signing of the name or identification tag inasmuch as at that time it was such a minor matter and added that it had occurred four years ago. u

Robert Berk
ROBERT BERK, Apartment Ten, 642 South Burnside
Avenue, was furnished with the official identities of SA's [redacted] and he voluntarily
furnished the following information: UK in Ireland

BERK stated that he had seen the FBI document in question upon which his name is superimposed, quite some time ago when it had been published by "Resist" or in "Ramparts". Since he learned of this, he had assumed that the FBI had been responsible for his name appearing on the document but that he is now convinced it was not the FBI who was responsible for it. U

After again looking at a copy of the superimposed FBI document, he said he was certain that the name tag involved came about from his attendance at the Conference of War Resisters, International, held at Haverford College, Haverford, Pennsylvania, which conference lasted about one week in August 1969. He had attended and stayed about three days. He said the handwriting "Oak Bridge, Ill." was his. He felt that the name tag in question was a form that he filled out upon his arrival at the conference and was then placed in a file for future mailings. He recalled that he was also given a small name tag which had a glue substance on its back and this was to be placed on the lapel or shirt front. He had no recollection of what had happened to this lapel name tag, but suspected that it had dropped off and was never replaced. Again, it was his opinion that the name tag superimposed on the FBI document probably came from the card issued at the conference which was placed in a file for future mailings. As he recalled, members of the War Resisters League (WRL) from the New York City area, were more or less in charge of running the Haverford Conference and were working at the registration desk and elsewhere. Many of these persons he had known in New York City and they were quite aware that he was suspected of being an FBI informant. He could think of no individuals in WRL who might have been responsible for deliberately placing his name tag on the stolen FBI document and said that even if he did suspect someone, he would not furnish the name of anyone to the FBI. However, he felt it was most likely that "he had been set up" by someone in the WRL as an act of revenge. U

He said that the Communist Party dislikes him enough to have done such a thing but he did not believe the Communist Party was involved in the theft of the FBI documents. He said he had been sent to the Helsinki Youth Festival in 1962 by the United States Government, through a front group, he suspected was the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). He did this only through his dislike of communism. He was later identified in publications as having reported on this youth festival for the Government and as a result, the Communist Party was quite aware of him and his activities. U

BERK said he did not believe that anyone connected with the Bethany Theological Seminary at Oak Brook, Illinois, was involved in the break-in of the FBI Office or of receiving and handling any stolen documents. He said that he had known most of those involved in war resistance there and all were of a type who might become involved in demonstrations and/or minor civil disobedience happenings but that all lacked the "guts" to do anything more. U

BERK said that he has been in the Los Angeles area the past one-and-one-half years and during this time he has been completely out of anything political concentrating wholly on religion. Prior to this and after learning about his name appearing on the FBI document, he had talked with many persons in various organizations involved in war resistance and no one knew who had been responsible for the actual break-in of the FBI Office in Media, Pennsylvania. It was his opinion that most individuals he had known in the movement were a type who could not keep quiet about such a "coup" and would brag about the incident if they were involved. U

BERK also pointed out that the document upon which his name appears is captioned, "Conference of War Resisters, Haverford College, Pennsylvania, 8/25 - 31/69" and in his opinion, since this was the time and place where he had been issued the name tag, it was more than a coincidence that this particular FBI letter surfaced with his name superimposed upon it. It was possible that this could have happened accidentally, but it was more likely that this was done on purpose to cause him further embarrassment among his liberal acquaintances. U

BERK advised that he now resides at this address and is presently employed as a Reverend with the Cochran Avenue Baptist Church. U

PURPOSE:

To advise that the 1/17/74 edition of captioned publication contains a reprint of National Academy lecture material reportedly stolen during Media break-in, and to recommend that such information be referred to Division Six for information and to Division Two and Office of Legal Counsel to identify and prepare damage assessment, if necessary. U

DETAILS:

Investigation concerning captioned publication (a member of the Underground Press Syndicate) was initiated in 8/71 to determine if contents thereof advocate civil disobedience, violence or other means of extremist activity, as well as the printing of other material relating to preparation and use of explosives. Investigation in this matter was discontinued 10/30/73 as no evidence had been uncovered indicating the activity of this publication constituted a violation of Federal law. U

By airtel 1/15/74, New York, under above caption, furnished copies of the 1/17/74 edition of "Win Magazine." This edition contains a reprint of a document reportedly stolen during the break-in of the Media, Pennsylvania, Resident Agency. The document in question deals with the subject of "Interviews" and appears to consist of lecture notes on that topic used at the FBI National Academy in 3/62. Page 4 of this publication also contains a listing of topics of other courses supposedly taught during Bureau instruction of police officers at the Academy, and which reportedly were similarly purloined during the Media break-in.
